SINFONÍA FAMILY SERVICES OF LOUISIANA PARTNERS WITH TULANE UNIVERSITY TO LAUNCH EARLY PSYCHOSIS INTERVENTION CLINIC IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, LA, August 26, 2015-Sinfonia Family Services of Louisiana, in partnership with Dr. Ashley Weiss, child and adolescent psychiatrist at Tulane University School of Medicine, Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences is launching the Early Psychosis Intervention Clinic (EPIC-NOLA). This is a comprehensive early intervention program targeting teens and young adults first experiencing psychotic symptoms with the overarching goal of getting young people back on track in their lives while providing gold-standard psychiatric care.

The EPIC-NOLA clinic is modeled after the Specialized Treatment in Early Psychosis (STEP) program at Yale University School of Medicine. Founded by Dr. Vinod Srihari, the STEP clinic has recently published results from the first randomized-controlled trial of first-episode services in the United States. The study found that 75% of FEP patients who had access to services such as cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT), vocational supports, and family education avoided hospitalization during a 1-year period compared with just over 50% of those allocated to usual care.

There is considerable national conversation about the importance of early intervention for psychosis, which is a psychiatric symptom of a mental illness, experienced as a loss of contact with reality. In 2014, Congress directed SAMHSA to require that 5% of their Community Health Services Block Grant to address the needs of people with early serious mental illness, such as schizophrenia and bipolar disorder. According to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), people with schizophrenia have higher rates of heart disease and premature death, 10% die by suicide, and the economic burden is greatest during the first year following the index (first) episode. The promising news is that international and national research has shown that specialized, early treatment of psychotic disorders improves not only medical outcomes, but social, and quality of life outcomes as well.

“I’d like to put first episode psychosis in the real-world context. These are adolescents and young adults who may be completing their education, getting their first jobs, moving away from home for the first time, and becoming independent individuals. In essence, they are figuring out who they are and who they want to be, so having a life-altering diagnosis can be traumatic. EPIC-NOLA represents the opportunity to help these individuals during a critical period of not only their illness, but their lives. Our mission is to help patients become responsible for their health, recognize their diagnosis does not define them, and support them in continued pursuit of their goals,” says Dr. Weiss.

Kathleen Saintcross, State Director for Sinfonia Family Services of Louisiana, believes that “the passionate, talented and trained team at Sinfonia, with the guidance of Dr. Weiss, can help change the trajectory of major mental illness and provide hope to the individual and their family, decrease fear and stigma, and help people towards recovery.”

Bess Hart, Deputy Director for Sinfonia Family Services of Louisiana, feels that “our focus on early intervention of psychosis will make a true impact for the mental health system in New Orleans, and the relationships of the lifestyle of the individuals in our program. Our staff are truly top-tier and dedicated to this outcome.”

“As an innovative private-academic partnership, EPIC-NOLA is the first of its kind to provide this type of programming in Louisiana. Currently providing services in the greater New Orleans area, but recognizing the greater need, we hope to replicate the model throughout the state”, says Jo-Ann Prisco, Sinfonia Healthcare Corporation Executive Vice President. Jo-Ann is responsible for introducing Sinfonia Family Services and their unique continuum in eastern markets.
